

A little history.....

QT Sydney is spread across two of Sydney's most prominent historical buildings, in the State Theatre and the Gowings building, both of which opened their doors way back in 1929. It's crazy to think people of our great grandparents' generation walked through the same doors and saw shows and went shopping within the very same walls that house our Rooms, Restaurants and Bars today. Originally designed by famed architect Crawford H Mackellar, the palazzo style Gowings building has gone from department store to offices to hotel, and since being QT Sydney, has had its gothic features thoughtfully returned to their former glory. It's since been recognised by the national trust of Australia as "a building of great historical significance and high architectural quality, the preservation of which is regarded as essential to our heritage".

Parlour Cucina, is also history-laden, with its original display glass cabinets from the state shopping block (Australia's first vertical shopping centre) and beautiful heritage tiled floors. The hotel itself is situated on the corner of George (quite possibly Sydney's first street) and Market street, two of Sydney's original thoroughfares during the colonial years, so as you can imagine, the surrounding areas have seen a world of change. To put it in perspective, 1929 was the year the stock market crashed, the great depression started, Bradman scored his first test century, Sydney still didn't have its first traffic light and prohibition was still in full swing in the US. QT Hotels is now the proud custodian of this magnificent building and the place it holds in Sydney's history.

Wine and Food

How to navigate

Like menus, wine lists are organised by texture or ‘body’. The lightest dish or wine at the top, more savoury and flavourful in the middle and the richest dish or wine at the bottom. You can start matching by simply finding wine and food in similar parts of a menu and wine list.

Ask us for a fitting

A big, solid piece of meat needs a big red wine with solid tannins to match its muscle. Small, delicate meats need lighter, fresher red wines with softer tannins and cleansing acidity to partner its delicate proteins, salts and fats. We call it the ‘glass slipper effect’ and its not about flavour or aroma but simply starting with the right size and fit.

How to eat more cheese

Cheese and wine is basically opposites attract. Cheese can be rich, savoury or gooey. Wine has varying levels of prickly acidity and drying tannin. Put them all together in the right combination and wines feel smoother and taste fruitier while the acid and tannin in wine act like a windshield wiper for your mouth, cleansing it of fat so basically you can eat more cheese – WIN!

Ask us for some flex

We love wines that have the ability to change or ‘flex’ with food. For instance tough, sturdy tannins don’t flex but soft savoury ones do. Hard acidity won’t flex but delicate acidity will. Lets find the wine with the right amount of flex for your meal!
